

Linnean Centre symposium for young plant scientists

5th of March 2019, Uppsala, Sweden

The Linnean Centre for Plant Biology in Uppsala welcomes applications from promising young scientists to attend a postdoc symposium in Uppsala 5th of March 2019. The aim of the symposium is to bring together postdoc candidates and Linnean Centre group leaders to identify common research interests and develop project ideas together. Prospective candidate/group leader-pairs are expected to submit a postdoc fellowship application to EMBO, Marie Skłodowska-Curie Actions, the Human Frontier Science Program, or another national/international funding body.

UPPSALA
UNIVERSITET

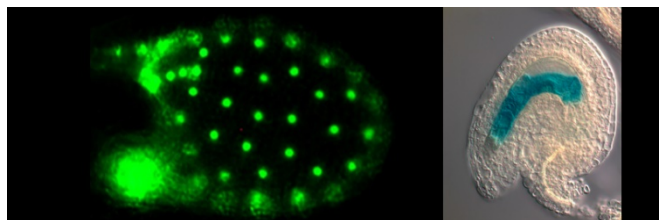

The Linnean Centre for Plant Biology in Uppsala is a joint research Centre of Uppsala University and Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences. The Centre fosters excellent research by providing an arena for cross-disciplinary contacts and the development of ground breaking research. The Centre is internationally recognized and attracts scientists from all over the world. The research is multi-faceted, ranging from studies of functional aspects of plant performance to interactions between plants and their environment.

To be eligible for participation in the symposium, you should have obtained your PhD after 1 October 2016 and have published at least one manuscript as first author in a peer-reviewed journal.

The best qualified candidates will be invited to the symposium during which they will get a chance to present their PhD work, visit the Linnean Centre, identify and discuss potential projects with different research groups, and visit the city of Uppsala. The Centre will cover all costs associated with the symposium.

To apply, send us a cover letter describing your research interests, CV and names of 2-3 reference persons. You should also list one or more research topics/groups at the Linnean Centre that attracts your interest, and justify your choice based on your experience and future plans.
